Lean Sigma Site Launches on Broadway

ADC is going lean. What is Lean? What is Six Sigma? Find out the difference on Broadway's new Lean Sigma site, available under the "Middle Column" from the home page. Here you can find resources for everything to help your team apply Lean and Six Sigma concepts to your work. Content includes:

- Training documents
- Tools and templates
- A list of Lean Sigma projects
- Lean success stories
- And who's who on the Lean Sigma Council.

Get online and begin your lean journey today at Broadway/Middle Column/Lean Sigma. Be on the lookout for regular updates regarding this new site in the ADCalmanac and on the Broadway home page.

ADC Wiki is Going ... Wiki. Improved Experience Coming

ADC Wiki is re-launching next week with a new look and improved functionality. Based on user feedback we have redesigned the platform to mimic your external wiki experience. Hint: Think Wikipedia.

New Look: The home page is updating its look. It will include the latest and most informative wiki content, including a featured article (which will be updated bi-weekly), a tip of the week and a listing of wiki pages that receive the most hits (the top five). You'll also be able to view the latest wiki modifications and be able to better manage your wiki pages.

ADC in the News: Distributed antenna system eliminates wireless interference issues for medical devices

With the increasing use of mobile phones and wireless devices in healthcare organizations it is becoming more important to find technical solutions to the issue of wireless signals interfering with medical devices and electronic systems. John Spindler, ADC Network Solutions, explains how a distributed antenna system within a healthcare organization can remove this problem and provide a more efficient communications system. Read it at Broadway/News & Media/Latest News.

Two Tons of Trash Equals a Lot of Caring

Under the hot New Mexico sun, 110 volunteers collected two tons of trash during ADC's Third Annual Keep Santa Teresa Beautiful event on July 11. Volunteers included ADC and Kelley employees, their friends and families. Read the complete story at Broadway/Functional Units/ADC Foundation/ADC Cares News.

U.S. Travel Update: Action Required for ALL U.S. Travelers

As of August 15, the U.S. Transportation Security Administration's (TSA) Secure Flight rule is in effect for all domestic aircraft operators whose flights operate within the United States. This new rule affects information that is loaded in travel profiles for all U.S. travelers. To avoid potential disruption to travel, please log in to Cliqbook and confirm the below information is accurate:

- Ensure that the name listed in your traveler profile exactly matches the name on the government-issued identification you plan to use at the airport.
- Ensure that your date of birth is listed within your profile.
- Ensure that your gender is listed within your profile.
- Frequent-Flyer Accounts: Issues related to frequent-flyer programs are not covered in the Secure Flight rule. Please call the individual airline, or visit their website, to learn more about any potential impacts to the frequent-flyer program(s).
